Statement on COVID-19 testing for essential workers

The Frimley Health and Care Integrated Care System has extended the availability of COVID-19 testing to a wide range of essential workers who play a vital role in caring for our local populations. This offers additional local testing facilities above and beyond the national staff testing offer.

To be eligible for the test the person must be; an essential worker* with COVID-19 symptoms, or someone (adult or child) who lives with an essential worker and has symptoms. The testing needs to be conducted within three days of symptoms developing, although testing can be effective up to day five.

Fiona Slevin-Brown, COVID-19 Gold Command for Frimley Health and Care Integrated Care System, said: "By increasing access to testing for a wide range of staff and their families who live in the same household, who have symptoms of Covid-19, we hope this will enable many of our essential workers to return to work, boosting staffing levels and helping to maintain critical services."

Essential workers can access staff testing in three ways;

1. A referral by their employer to locally-managed testing via email ebpc.covid19@nhs.net or phone 03000 770 007
2. A self-referral to the national testing scheme <https://self-referral.test-for-coronavirus.service.gov.uk/>
3. A referral by their employer to the national testing scheme. In order to obtain a login, employers of essential workers should email: portalservicedesk@dhsc.gov.uk

All Frimley Health and Care partner organisations have received referral details and have shared these with their staff.

Social Care workers and NHS workers without symptoms can choose either of the national routes.
